Planes of Bomber, Fighter, Coastal and Army Commands Cooperate with Main Force by Attacking Nazi Airdromes in Germany, France and Low Countries to Keep as Many Luftwaffe Planes as Possible on Ground — Marvelous Achievement in Co-ordination.

(By Leo V. Dolan, I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, June 2—Britain sent 1,130 bombers over Germany last night for the second time in three days in a gigantic mass raid in which millions of pounds of explosives were hurled down upon the industrial Ruhr area, Prime Minister Winston Churchill announced today.

The raid was concentrated in the region of the vital manufacturing city of Essen, site of the huge Krupp iron and steel works.

Essen is a large railway center in the heart of the Reich's coal and iron fields 22 miles northeast of Dusseldorf.

Churchill said that according to first reports the Royal Air Force bombers started numerous widespread conflagrations equal to the devastation inflicted Saturday upon Cologne.

He said 35 British bombers were missing as a result of the raid.

"No fewer than 1,130 British manned aircraft," operated in the Cologne assault, Churchill said in revealing for the first time the number of planes which actually participated.

During the attack on the Ruhr, planes of the bomber, fighter, coastal and army commands co-operated with the main bomber force by attacking Nazi airdromes in Germany, France and the Low Countries to keep as many Luftwaffe planes as possible on the ground. The same tactics were used to eliminate aerial opposition when the mass raid was made on Cologne.

The Prime Minister said that although Britain intended to keep battering Germany continually, every raid might not involve a force of 1,000 planes. The number to be employed, he explained, would depend upon the type of operation.

"I do not wish it supposed that all our raids on Germany in the future will be above the four figure scale," he said.

"Methods of attack will be varied continually, according to the circumstances."

"On the other hand," he continued, "these two great night bombing raids mark an introduction of a new phase of the British air offensive against Germany and this will increase markedly in scale when we are joined, as we soon shall be, by the air forces of the United States."

"German cities, harbors and centers of war production will be subjected to an ordeal the like of which never has been experienced in any country in continuity, severity and magnitude."

The aircraft bomber command, headed by Air Marshal A. T. Harris, said that every bomber taking part in last night's raid on the Essen district was made in Britain, as were the craft used in the Cologne attack.

The new mammoth raid was a marvelous achievement in organization and co-ordination, considering the tremendous preparation and calculations involved in the Cologne raid only two nights previously.

The bomber command was fully prepared to conduct a giant raid Sunday night but inclement weather forced a postponement. It was understood the points blasted last night were the targets picked for Sunday.

Some of the pilots who were on the Cologne assault participated in the Essen attack.

Before taking off last night some of these said "There is nothing we would like better than another party like Saturday's."

SCHOOL TEACHERS ASK TO BE PAID TWICE MONTHLY

Request 10-Day "Sick-Leave" Each Year and District To Pay Substitute

NEW TEACHER NAMED

Jean C. Wallick, Temple, To Teach Home Economics Next Term

The Bristol School Board is considering adding a preliminary course in aeronautics to the public school curriculum next year. Nothing definite has been decided, but the matter is being given serious consideration. Physics and mathematics would be emphasized in the course as applied to aeronautics.

The monthly meeting of the Board was held last night instead of this evening, due to the fact that commencement will be held this evening.

A letter was read from the Internal Policies Committee of the Bristol School Teachers' Association, of which Thomas Coles is chairman, requesting that the teachers be paid on the first and 15th of each month, instead of monthly as is now the custom. It was also suggested that the Board give consideration to the adoption of a "10-day sick leave" annually. This would mean that each teacher would be granted 10 days "sick leave" and the School District would pay the substitute teacher. The ten day "sick leave" would not be accumulative but would apply in case of personal illness, quarantine or death in the immediate family.

The Board ruled that the present plan of paying teachers monthly should be continued and the "sick leave" plan be rejected as the present budget arrangement did not provide for the additional expense.

Jean Christian Wallick, Drexel Hill, and a graduate of Temple University, was elected Home Economics Teacher to succeed Mrs. Ruth Gilpin. Additional instruments are to be purchased for the band to the extent of $200.

A First-Aid Unit for emergency purposes, as recommended by the American Red Cross, is to be purchased and located in a central school building.

Asa Fabian was awarded the contract to supply first-aid supplies, he being the lowest bidder.

FAIR RENTS GROUP TO BE DISSOLVED

Work To Be Taken Over By Federal Government On June 28th

FORMED IN JANUARY

On June 28th the Federal Government will take over the work now being done by the Fair Rents Committee of the Bucks County Council of Defense, and after that date all complaints relative to rents will be submitted to the representative of the Federal Courts, said an announcement today.

The Bucks County Fair Rents Committee has been in existence since the first of the year and during the past five months has heard complaints from all parts of the county. The majority of the complaints have been adjusted satisfactorily to both landlord and tenants. Not all decisions have been made in favor of the tenant, according to Mrs. Martha S. Woolley, Secretary of the Committee, the landlord benefiting in several instances.

Under the provisions of the orders issued by OPA, rents were frozen as of March 1, 1942. Complaints that rents have been raised beyond the amount of that date should be submitted to the Fair Rents Committee before June 28th, in order to be given consideration.

The members of Bucks County committee are Edward G. Biester, Fred M. Martin, W. A. Rossiter, Miss Lenore Burton and Mrs. Martha S. Woolley.

MAKES A CONFESSION

SELLERSVILLE, Pa., June 2 (INS)—Authorities disclosed today that Henry Hartzell, fatally wounded in a gun battle last night after being trapped in a Bucks County cabin, confessed slaying his father, John, 69.

The climax to the all-day manhunt through woods and deep foliage by a posse of police and volunteers came at twilight, when the burly slayer was located in a shack in West Rockhill township, near here. As police smashed down the front door, Hartzell suddenly rushed through the opening, firing his revolver twice before being brought down by a hail of bullets.

CONTROL CENTERS ESTABLISHED IN LANGHORNE DEFENSE ZONE; COMPRISES FOUR BOROUGHES AND ONE TOWNSHIP

LANGHORNE, June 2—To effect better control of all services in case of air raids, centers have been established in every defense sector in the Langhorne zone. A few have been completed, and tests will be held to demonstrate their efficiency. The State Council of Defense has sent out instructions for operating these "nerve centers" in every community. The zone comprises Langhorne, Langhorne Manor, South Langhorne, Hulmeville, Middletown Township.

Local councils of defense have appointed commanders whose jobs are to coordinate the various activities. Charts and tables of organization show the personnel and their duties. The chiefs of the services will thus receive reports at a central point and will be in possession immediately of all information so that they can direct their own work without the delay of overlapping transmission.

The zone control center will operate under the direction of Joseph Keating, zone chief of emergency police; William A. Thomas, zone chief of air raid wardens; Frank Vogenberger, zone chief of demolition, and Dr. Guilem Mackmull, zone chief of emergency medical services.

Langhorne borough council of defense has appointed William Gaston, commander of its sector control center, with Joseph Zalot as assistant. Charles Prael, who resigned as sector warden in order to devote his full time to fire control, will represent the fire department as chief. Floyd Marlatt, the new sector warden; George Mather, chief of emergency police; and Anna Mather, first aid, are the other members of the control center. Their headquarters will be in the fire station.

Big Convoy Lands Safely

London—Attacked continuously for five days and nights by dive-bombers, torpedo aircraft and submarines, another large convoy of United Nations merchant ships carrying supplies for Russia has "fought its way" safely to a Northern Russian port, the British Admiralty announced today.

A communique describing briefly what must have been one of the most dramatic events of the war did not identify the Russian port, but it was presumed to have been Murmansk.

The convoy was believed to have been made up chiefly of British and American vessels.

The communique said: "The passage was made in the face of U-boats and a heavy, determined air attack delivered almost continuously for five days and nights."

A German claim that 18 ships in the convoy were sunk was branded as "an exaggeration by over 175 per cent."—indicating that not more than two or three vessels had gone down.

NUMBER OF AWARDS MADE, BENSLEM'S 18TH GRADUATION

Diplomas Presented To 75 By Superintendent A. Kurtz King

DR. LYNCH, SPEAKER

Tells That Personalities Develop Through Strenuous Living

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, June 2—

Telling of a more abundant experience through "Livable Lives," Dr. Clyde M. Lynch, president of Lebanon Valley College, informed the 75 graduates of Bensalem Township High School last evening that his wish for them is that they might have a "hard time." "For personalities are developed only by strenuous living," he added as he definitely told the young men and young women that the last thing he would desire for them would be an "easy" experience in life.

Dr. Lynch, who was introduced by the superintendent of Bensalem Township schools, addressed the class of 1942 and the audience which filled the auditorium to witness the 18th annual commencement exercises of the school. His address, and a project by four members of the graduating class preceded presentation of awards and diplomas.

The speaker, in presenting his subject of "Livable Lives," mentioned the three main attributes of such as: Labor, Laughter (or Leisure) and Love. The need for each individual to secure the best from life was impressed on the young folks, who were informed that "Lives that transcend the mere level of animal existence are abundant lives." He expressed regret that so many persons never get beyond the idea of satisfying the elemental needs—never thrill to a beautiful sunset or masterpiece in oil, and who appear to be blind and deaf to all stimulus that are not related to the mere making of a living.

Scoring the satisfaction found by many who accept all too readily an easy life Dr. Lynch added: "The minute the individual extends his hand for a dole, rather than work when he is able, he has announced to the world that his ambition has died. Work helps to develop personality."

Considering that in some types of work, where there is a sameness of task or motion, day by day, the speaker urged that individuals who find themselves in that groove "do the next best thing—get a hobby." He expressed satisfaction over the modern trend in high schools, where youth, who does not care to attend college, or who is unable to do so, can discover a type of work to which he is best suited.

The young people were told of the value of good health, and urged to seek such at all times. "Too many people spend more money for silk shirts and cosmetics than for health," adding that the best kind of exercise costs nothing as he told of his enjoyment of walking. "We spend all kinds of money for athletic equipment for our schools, but when it comes to exercise for all of the pupils we are woefully deficient."

That the first requisite of a "livable life" is economic security was one point brought out. Laughter was placed high on the requisites, Dr. Lynch stating that he pitied the man who does not have a sense of humor. "If we can't see the lighter side, we're not perfectly developed. And if we've needed a sense of humor it is now... It's not how long a person lives, but how abundantly he lives that counts."

The graduates were advised to look upon life as a series of commensurations or "accumulative experiences."

One Man's Opinion

By WALTER KIERNAN (I. N. S. Staff Writer)

A reporter, back from Germany, reports that the people will "eat weeds" before they'll give up.

Remember that the next time you hear one of those stories about how close we are to victory.

Because the Germans aren't eating weeds yet.

They're eating some pretty unpalatable stuff but they haven't gotten to the weeds.

They're last ditchers in a total war.

In 1935, total production of airplanes in the United States was 1,591.

Match that against a thousand planes sweeping over Cologne in a single night and you get an idea of one phase of total war.

The British dropped everything on Cologne but Big Ben.

They went in like the Bronx Express and on faster headway.

But the Nazis didn't surrender next day.

Thought for the day: It's no pushover.

NAVY CONVOY RECORD

No navy in the history of the world ever approached the record of the United States Navy in the successful escorting of vast fleets of troop and merchant ships. Prior to the First World War it was the conviction of all leading naval authorities that mass convoys were so vulnerable that no naval force could protect them.

The Germans were sure that the American Navy could never land an effective army in Europe. The British felt that even with their help the mission would be so costly in lost men and ships that the American people would decline to support the plan.

But the American Navy, with some aid in European waters from the British, transported an army of 2,000,000 Americans to Europe without the loss of a troop ship to the enemy. It kept this army supplied with food, equipment and all forms of arms except heavy guns. It got an American railway system, including engines, to Europe. Its achievement broke the heart of the German army and contributed as much as any other performance, before or after America's entrance, to winning the war.

Today the American Navy is doing even better. It has not as yet lost a troop ship, though it is transporting men to all parts of the world and at the same time is waging the fiercest naval warfare since the Navy's glorious combat record in the War of 1812.

The task force plan, which calls for Army aid in the air, has helped, and sacrifices have been made on the Atlantic sea frontier, but with the facilities that it has the Navy is again demonstrating that the enemy which underestimates the power of the American Navy is lost.

HAIR ALL-OUT

If there is such a thing as going to extremes of patriotism, it is reflected in the report of an American optical manufacturing firm to the effect that it is being overwhelmed by shipments of superfluous hair conceived as raw material for bomb sights.

This all-out effort on the part of many feminine contributors, conceivably inspired by the historic heedlessness of Barbara Frietchie, is something that the firm doesn't care great shakes about—its hands will already full of war orders.

The undersigned firm points out—calling all hair donors—that modern bomb sights are made with a fine bit of engraving, not with the finely spun cobweb previously used. Obviously, any resemblance to living or dead hair is purely coincidental. Some of the hirsute donations came from attic chests. One soft, brown braid was almost five feet long. Colors ranged from platinum blonde to jet black. One woman, inspired by fervent patriotism, sent what appeared to be stuffing from a discarded mattress.

Whatever the patriotic bed made for them, the manufacturers refuse to fit in it, insisting that they cannot make use of hirsute materials by a homelike. In fact, further contributions of the sort are likely to make them tear their own hair out.

Just what started the avalanche of silver threads among the gold is hard to conceive. Possibly all this movement for conservation of waste materials, possibly the release of a movie short subject on the manufacture of bomb sights, or not impossibly a vague mental association of a permanent wave with the Stars and Stripes.

If you do this the best will always be ahead," he added. In conclusion the college president advised: "Have leisure, and laugh a little as well as labor, Love! This is last but not least. Unless our hearts go into our work, our lives will be sterile. We should have a deep love of our country. We must know America with our hearts. We must love God, and remember that when we forget God we are likely to lose our liberties. Unless we love our God, and support our churches, whatever else we have or may do will be in vain. If we follow these leadings no

"You see, old chap, I can understand how Truslove feels. Legally you're—well, I won't say dead exactly—but not normally alive. He's bound to look at things from that angle. What I mean is, if anything were to happen to the old man—let's hope it won't, but you never can tell—you wouldn't get a look in. Now that's not fair to you, especially as there's plenty for everybody. God bless. That's why I think Truslove's right—surely there must be a way of breaking good news gently—Sheldon, for instance—"

"Yes, we all think of Sheldon in emergencies. But I do hope, Chet, you won't press the matter. Truslove tells me there'll be no difficulty about my resuming the income we all had from Mother—"

"But good Lord, man, you can't live on five hundred a year!"

"Oh, I don't know. Quite a number of people seem to manage on it."

"But—my dear chap—where? What would you do?"

"Don't know exactly. But I dare say I should find something."

"Of course if you fancied a salaried job in one of the firms—"

"I rather feel that most jobs in firms wouldn't appeal to me."

"You wouldn't have to take it very seriously."

"Then it would probably appeal to me even less. . . . But we don't have to decide it now, do we?"

"No, of course not. Have a drink?"

"No, thanks."

"I think I will. Tell you the truth, all this is just about wearing me down. Gave me an appetite at first, but now I feel sort of—"

"You mean all the fuss connected with my return?"

"Oh, not your fault, old chap. After all, what else could you do? But you know what families are like—and wives. Argue a man off his head."

"But what could there have been any argument about?"

"Well, Truslove and Sanderstead—like cat and dog all day. Personally, as I told you, I back Truslove—but Lydia—well, she's never seen you before—she can't help feeling there's something a bit fishy about it—and of course, old chap, you must admit you haven't explained everything down to the last detail."

"I'm aware of that. If the last detail were available, I should be very glad to know it myself."

"Don't misunderstand me, though. Far more things in heaven and earth than—than something or other—know what I mean? I accept your statement absolutely."

"But I haven't made any statement."

"Well, at breakfast you did—you said you were all right—normal, I mean. And I'm prepared to take your word for it whatever anyone else thinks."

"Meaning that your wife believes I'm a fake?"

"A fake or else. . . . Well, if she does, she's wrong, that's all I can tell her."

"I hope you won't bother to."

"Nice of you to put it that way, but still. . . . Sure you won't have a drink?"

"No thanks."

"Cheerio, then. God bless. . . ."

By evening Charles decided to leave. It was not that anyone had been unkind to him—quite the contrary, but he felt that he was causing a disturbance, and the disturbance disturbed him just as much as the others. He had given Truslove and Sanderstead his decision; it merely irritated him that they continued to wrangle. "The fact is, Sheldon, my remaining here is just an added complication at the moment, affording no pleasure either to myself or anyone else—so I'll just fold my tent and silently steal away. But I won't go far and I'll leave you my address so that you can get in touch with me if there's any need—if, for instance, Sanderstead decides my father's well enough to see me."

A trenchant pause ensued.

EDDINGTON, June 2—A holiday wedding ceremony, performed at 2.30 o'clock on Saturday in Eddington Presbyterian Church, united Miss Ethel Mary Hartman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Hartman, Torresdale Manor, and Mr. Harry Jefferson Bush, Wilmington, Del.

The Rev. Arthur D. Sargis officiated; with Miss Dorothy Wenner, Torresdale Manor, presiding at the organ console. The attendants of the couple were Miss Hilda Leverside, Andalusia, maid of honor; and Private Louis E. Hartman, of Camp Livingston, La., brother of the bride, as best man.

The bride gown was of white satin, the bride wearing a veil of net, and carrying gardenias and orchids. Miss Leverside was attired in a floor-length gown of rose-toned taffeta and net, and wore a matching headpiece of net with a short veil. Her bouquet was composed of mixed flowers.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Green Light Restaurant, with covers arranged for 71. Upon their return from a journey to New York City, Mr. and Mrs. Bush will reside in Wilmington.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)

Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

O Thou Eternal Spirit, who hast set our noisy years in the heart of eternity, lift us above the strife and evil of the passing time, that under the shadow of thy wings we may take courage and be glad. So great art thou that we could not speak to thee if thou didst not first draw near to us and say "Seek ye my face." Unto thee our hearts make reply this day, "Thy face, Lord, we seek." Give us success in our quest, and enable us to live in the light of thy countenance, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

BOWS TO EDGELY NINE

Despite the heavy bludgeon wielded by Danny Mazzillo, the Voltz-Texaco team bowed to the league-leading Edgely team last night on St. Ann's field. Final score was: Edgely, 9; Voltz-Texaco, 2.

Mazzillo hit Howard Black for a double and triple to continue to lead the extra-base hitters of the Suburban League. His triple in the final inning drove in both of his team's runs but fell one short of deadlocking the score.

As he lay in the dirt, Hartzell slowly raised his gun and aimed it at Ernest Guent, West Rockhill sawmill operator who led the posse to the hide-out, but was too weak to shoot.

On his deathbed in the Sellersville Hospital, Hartzell confessed he shot his father to death about three months ago, but claimed he only did it in self-defense and exhibited a scar on his hand as proof, police reported.

Green Makes Cross-Country
Flight in Excellent Time

Marty Green, who on Memorial Day was one of the participants in an armada of planes demonstrating the state's air-strength, was one of the first three out of 11 starters arriving at their destination in a cross-country leap.

The flight was one of the events in which an armada of more than 300 planes from practically every airport in Pennsylvania participated. The squadrons comprised the Pennsylvania wing of the Civil Air Patrol, and were mobilized to show the part civilian pilots are playing in patrolling strategic objectives on the lookout for enemy attack.

Maneuvers at the Black Moshannon landing field near Phillipsburg, included bomb dropping exhibitions, location of "lost" aircraft, dropping of supplies, and a general review.

A group of 11 planes led by Commander Ralph Earle, of the Southeastern Unit, took off from Wings Field near Ambler at 7.30 a. m. The group bucked a strong head wind over the mountains and lost its formation. Green was one of the first three to arrive at the destination. The planes reformed at Harrisburg. Striking the tail end of a storm over the Alleghenies, referred to as Pennsylvania's "graveyard" by pilots, two planes made forced landings, and three turned back. Stragglers continued to arrive at Phillipsburg until noon.

One of the speakers, Major Earl Johnson, national wing commander, told the 700 pilots and fellow members that the War Department is planning new duties for the patrol, including mail carrying on short hauls.

MAGLIONE RETURNS TO HOME FIGHTING GROUNDS AND IN FOUR ROUNDS KNOCKS OUT BLACKWELL

(By T. M. Juno)

Tony Maglione returned to his home fighting grounds last night and in four rounds did away with Henry Blackwell, Philadelphia, in the windup of a curtailed show in the St. Ann's outdoor arena. Wood and Franklin streets. The Trenton boy stopped the colored boy after 42 seconds of the fourth.

Promoter Clem Cipparone adhered to the clamor of the 1200 fight fans to put on the main attraction after the rain had caused a 15-minute intermission. The fans were craving for action and despite the downpour the seats were filled as Announcer Mike DeKisi stated that the Maglione-Blackwell bout would go on.

The fighters did not seem to mind the rain as they tore into one another from the start. Blackwell's best round was the second, while Maglione won the first and third rounds and finished by his kayo in the fourth.

The former St. Ann's amateur fighter, who got his start in the same ring that he fought in last night, was on the offensive from the start of the bout. Blackwell seemed to lack aggressiveness and would attempt to counterpunch after Tony got in a few left jabs. In the first round, Tony shook his opponent by sinking two lefts to his body. This round was so fierce that Referee Moffo had trouble in stopping the boys from exchanging blows after the bell had sounded, ending the canto.

Blackwell got back what he lost in the first session by rocking Maglione as he cornered him after the Trentonian had missed with a hook and slipped. Blackwell plastered Maglione with rights and lefts here, but Maglione managed to tie him up and wait for the break. In another exchange towards the finish of the round, Maglione was again on the receiving end of several body blows.

The third round was the beginning of the end for Blackwell. The colored boy had opened a slight cut over Maglione's eye in the second, and seemed to make this his target. But in shifting for Maglione's optic, Blackwell opened his guard and this enabled the Trenton boy to measure him up and then nail him with the right. Twice Maglione's hard punches seemed to shake Blackwell as his guard was open.

As the fourth opened both fighters went at top speed but only 42 seconds had elapsed when Blackwell went down from a barrage of body blows.

Maglione weighed 146 pounds, while the Philadelphia boy came in at 141 pounds.

Joseph "Jobby" Dugan, Otter street youngster, made his professional debut by putting to sleep Sam Correll, Salem, after one minute and 32 seconds of the first round.

Dugan, former A. A. U. sub-novice heavyweight champion, had little trouble with Correll, who has yet to muffle the local boy's hair. Dugan just danced around a bit, waited for an opening, socked his foe with a short right and the bout was over, with Moffo giving Correll the full count.

Another former St. Ann's boxer, Clem Kinsey, 158 pounds, was a big disappointment, as he was the victim of a technical knockout at the hands of Billy Williams, 155 pounds, Philadelphia.

Kinsey did not land a good blow during the bout and along with Williams was given the razberries when they failed to mix it in the first round.

In the second they did tie into each other and right at the start a right-hand punch by Williams sent Kinsey through the ropes. He was up at the count of nine and still groggy. Williams slammed him a few more times and Kinsey went down. Here Referee Moffo intervened and stopped the bout after 58 seconds had elapsed.

The semi-windup lasted two rounds as the veteran Fred Nebo, 141, Philadelphia, was stopped by Frank O'Hara, 143, also of Philadelphia, in the third round. Nebo had won the first round but from then on was on the receiving end of many punches. He was floored for the count of seven prior to the knockout and it was a damaging short right which did the trick for O'Hara. The time of the T. K. O. was two minutes and ten seconds of the third.

Eddie Claytor, Philadelphia, won the opener from Sam Williams, Philadelphia, in a four-rounder. Claytor lost the first round and won the rest. The lighter boy was down for the count of one just before the bell sounded to end the first session.

In the final round, Claytor twice shook his foe but could not floor him.

Promoter Clem Cipparone announced that he was satisfied with the support given him by the local fans for his first bout and feels that despite the weather and other obstacles the bouts went off as good as expected. He announced that with proper support he will be able to secure bouts as good as those of last night and that his next show will be held on Tuesday night, June 16.
